SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

Coal mining rights of the Dominion, in Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta, and the Territories, the North-West Territories and British Columbia, may be leased for a term of one or two years, or for a longer period, not exceeding ten years, or for a shorter period, not more than three years, or for a year or more. Not more than 2,500 acres will be leased to one applicant.

Application for a lease must be made to the Agent or Supervisor of the district in which the land is situated, for application.

In several districts the land must be described by sections, or local sub-divisions, or ascertained by the surveyor who has the tract applied for shall be marked out.

Each application must be accompanied by a fee, but the amount is not specified, but otherwise no fee is required.

As regards the cost of the lease, it is not mentioned.

Every lessee of coal mining rights which are not being operated, shall furnish the district Agent or Supervisor a written statement of his intentions, and the time when he proposes to commence operations.

The lessee will include the cost of mining rights, but the amount is not specified, nor is there any charge whatever, available surface rights may be considered necessary for the working of the coal.

For full information application should be made to the Agent or Supervisor of the Interior, Ottawa, or to any Agent or Sub-Agent of Dominion lands.

W. W. CORY
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS

At the very numbered section of the Dominion Lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, excepted from the 20, not more than 160 acres may be homesteaded by a person who is head of a family, or any male over 16 years of age, to take up the land, and to cultivate it for at least six months, and to live on it for at least six months.

The homesteader is required to perform the conditions connected therewith under one of following methods:

(1) At least six months residence and cultivation, and to leave the land for at least three years.

If the father (or the mother, if the father is deceased) of the homesteader resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the settler, the person to whom the residence may be assigned by such person residing with the father or mother, may apply for the homestead.

(2) If the settler has his permanent residence outside of the boundaries of the District of his homestead, the requirements as to residence may be satisfied by residence upon his said residence, provided that six months notice to apply for patent to the Land Commissioner of Dominion lands at Ottawa is given to apply for patent.

W. W. CORY
Deputy Minister of the Interior.

NOTICE

Sittings of the District Court will be held at the following times and places, commencing at 10 A.M. on Wednesday, February 2nd.
At Cowley, on Thursday, February 3rd.
At Blairstown on Friday, the 4th day of June, 1910.

B. WOODS
Deputy Attorney General.

Last Thursday night the Frank hockey team came up to our village and challenged the local team to combat on our rink. The challenge was accepted and at 8:30 the game started. The ice was in fine condition and the Frank team scored time after time in very short order until the score stood 10-2 when the gong rang, closing the game.

It is claimed by some that our hockey team is too light for heavy work and too heavy for light work. But don't forget, the Blairstown team will be heard from yet.

BIG LAND DEAL

Eastern Capitalists Purchase 1,430 Lots Near Macleod

The biggest land deal in the history of Macleod was consummated yesterday.

Territory immediately adjacent to the townsite, aggregating 1,430 lots has been purchased by eastern capitalists who will proceed to develop the property for all it is worth.

These men, who have been in town for a week past, studying the town's advantages and estimating its future, know the west and are convinced that right here is the best opportunity in the Dominion.

They paid a fancy price for the tract of land but consider that it was worth every penny. They are not buying for speculative purposes but for immediate development.

They propose to advertise their enterprise, and of course Macleod, all over Canada, the United States and Great Britain. Details of this great advertising scheme are now being worked out. It will result in the name of Macleod being known to the two continents.

Our resources, our wheat fields, our industrial advantages, our shipping facilities, our improvement programme, our municipal works, our building opportunities will be made known far and wide.

The deal was put through by E. R. Sims, of the Macleod Land and Improvement Company. The details are now being arranged and will be announced later.—Macleod Advertiser.

Old Timer Returns

J. H. Garton, an old timer in the Crows Nest Pass visited our office during the week. Mr. Garton recently returned from South Africa where he has been employed during the past few years and reports that he is glad to be back in Alberta, once again as he considers now that Alberta is the best place for a working man that he knows of. There is no eight hour law from bank to bank in South Africa and generally speaking the labour conditions throughout the country are not equal to western Canada.

A miner there has to present his good conduct card. That is a card showing where he was last employed and reasons for leaving such employment. In western Canada this card system is not in vogue and it is to be hoped it will never be as the working men have enough difficulties at present.

Another New Industry

John F. Wilson started today to open up another new coal property southeast of Coleman and on the same series of coal as the International are working at the present time. This property is owned by Spokane capitalists who know well the value of this coal and no doubt they will develop their mine on a large scale. It is understood that a large tunnel will be driven as soon as buildings are erected to house the employees.

A survey line was run in to this property some years ago from some point east of McLaren's mill and it is reported that a first-class grade was found. With this property opening up so close to hand we can well lay claim to the "Pittsburgh of Canada."

One hundred tons of coke are shipped daily, while 100 tons of coal is supplied to the railroad coal chutes daily, which, with the coal shipped to Cranbrook, Sedan and Nelson, make a good showing for a coal property that is so young.—Hosmer Times.

THE NEW ROAD

Trail Would be Sufficient at Present. Will Build

Road Later

The South Fork road has apparently been shieved for the present time and the work of estimating and surveying the route will not be carried out until later on. A large number of the citizens were present at the first meeting held in connection with the building of the road and several were of the opinion that the settlement of the South Fork did not warrant the building of a road at this time.

The settlement in the North Kootenay Pass as it is at the present time certainly does not appear to be a live one for the people of this village during the coming summer and now is the time to get down to hard work and have some sane and sound method or system for getting water into the village. Our population is rapidly increasing and the water supply is not sufficient to meet the demands. This work will have to be undertaken this coming spring and with our plans laid now and the whole question thoroughly understood by those who will be required to look after the interests of the village there is no reason why the work should not be rushed to completion before next fall. The contracts for digging the mains and supplying all the material should be let to some responsible contractor as soon as possible so that he may have time to get all the supplies he may require on the ground before the time comes for actual work.

Should the Carbon Hill Railway

Co begin operations on their line

the North Kootenay Pass in spring there will be more trade in that section of the country than the business men of Blairstown will be able to attend to at any rate

there should be a trail from Blairstown to the North Kootenay Pass.

The route across the mountains

now is about six miles east of Blairstown, then when you cross into the North Kootenay Pass you have to travel back up the Pass the same six miles to come to a point opposite Blairstown, which makes twelve miles you have travelled over and above the distance across the mountains from Blairstown.

In the present time a good trail along the proposed wagon road would help considerably and later on, as the business increases, a wagon road could be constructed.

The deal was put through by E. R. Sims, of the Macleod Land and Improvement Company. The details are now being arranged and will be announced later.—Macleod Advertiser.

New Coal Washing Plant

A contract has been let by the Hosmer Mines, Ltd., for the erection of a coal washing machine with a capacity of five hundred tons a day. The machine will be delivered at Hosmer on April 1st.

The washer will be erected in the tipple and will work in connection with the machinery of the latter and it is expected to clean the finer portion of the coal so that it will be absolutely clear from culm and other impurities, thus guaranteeing a perfect coke.

Coke has been previously made in the entire Pass with small and mine coal and while good coke has been made so far, yet it cannot possibly compare with coke made from coal that has been thoroughly cleaned. This will be the first installation of such a plant in any western coke making field.

The new washer will cost approximately $25,000.00.

The development of the coal property proceeds very rapidly and new men are being added to the pay roll, which is good news to those people interested in the town.

One hundred tons of coke are shipped daily, while 100 tons of coal is supplied to the railroad coal chutes daily, which, with the coal shipped to Cranbrook, Sedan and Nelson, make a good showing for a coal property that is so young.—Hosmer Times.

Theodore Marcell, Harry Kanouse and Walter Matheson, employees of the North Kootenay Pass Coal Co., came into town Monday evening to sign the pay roll.

WATER WORKS

Time is Now Ripe for Action in Regard to New Water Works

The citizens are now beginning to look forward to the time when the village water system will be installed. During the past year a contract was let to Mr. Lake, of Calgary, to give the village a water system but Mr. Lake failed to live up to the contract that was drawn up and consequently lost it. The question will be a live one for the people of this village during the coming summer and now is the time to get down to hard work and have some sane and sound method or system for getting water into the village. Our population is rapidly increasing and the water supply is not sufficient to meet the demands. This Is No Dream

Tell me not in idle jingle
Marriage is an empty jingle,
For the girl is dead that's single
And things are not what they seem.

Life is real, Life is earnest,
Sing, blessedness a fib,
Man thou art to man returnest,
Has been spoke of the rib.

Not enjoyment and not sorrow
Is our destined end of way.
But to act that each to-morrow
Finds us nearer marriage day.

Life is long and youth is fleeting,
And our hearts though light and gay
Still like pleasant drums are braying
Wedding marches all the day.

In the world broad fields of battle,
In the bivouac life of life.
Be not like dumb cattle driven,
Be a heroine, A Wife.

Trust no future, however pleasant,
Let the dead past bury its dead.
Act in the living present,
Heart within and hope abroad.

Lives of married folks remind us,
We can live our lives as well,
And departing leave behind us
Such examples as shall tell

Such examples that another,
Wastling time in like sport;
A forlorn unmarried brother seeing
Shall take heart and court.

Let them be up and doing, With a heart on triumph set;
SHH contriving, still pursuing,
And each one a husband get.

This cost of having two telephones in the office has its disadvantages, too. I said to my business manager, "Get a single office boy; one of his duties is to answer the telephone." CHILDHOOD INDIGESTION
MEANS SICKLY BABIES

The baby who suffers from indigestion is simply starved to death. It takes a great deal of time for the child to eat, and it is cross, restless and sleepless, and the mother is worn out caring for it. Baby's Own Tablets are the cure for all cases of indigestion. They are healthy, natural sleep. Mrs. A. P. Daigle, Lower Sackville, N.B., says—"The severe cases of indigestion I think are the cause of babies not growing well. They are worth their weight in gold. My little one suffered terribly from this trouble and the Tablets were the only thing that would help her. I am giving them to all the babies now."

A well known Brooks physician was troubled with a class of nurses who had served their patients in the hospital. The candidates filled past him, and to each he asked himself, "What value can show to prove the nurse's efficiency?" In one of the questions he described the condition of a patient, and asked the nurse to give him morphine, in her opinion, should be administered to the sufferer.

"Eight grains," promptly replied the nurse.

The doctor made no comment, and she passed on. When her turn came again she answered greatly confused, and said to the examiner, "I wish to correct the answer I made last time. I meant to say that one-eighth of a grain should be given to the patient."

"That's late," remarked the doctor, without looking up from his question paper. "The man's dead."

AERIAL COSTUMES.

Clothes For Women Aviators Are Now the Thing In London.

A London firm has already designed and had made what it calls a serial costume; in other words, a dress to be worn by women aviators. It consists of a top-skirt, a beautiful dark red, though, of course, any other color could be chosen, a wide belt, a long skirt and a close-fitting. The buttons are of natural colored bone and are set in a belt which is possible, for these buttons are now to be had in any good store and easily mix them with a large bottle.

The blouse is caught in at the waist with an elastic band and over this long stiffened gauntlet gloves are to be worn. The coat is lined throughout with a soft thick fabric in the natural color. The divided skirt is extremely full and is fastened with satin and caught at the knee in the same bangles which go under the long boots.

For headgear the newest type of motor bonnet is the style suggested. It consists of a cage shape, composed of leather to match the coat, and has rather a deep front, which is lined with plush, satin and generally worn with a high collar. The coat is lined with a small horn button which is necessary for the eyes from the nose. At the waist the coat is open and at the side of the front.

The whole outfit is neat and smart in the extreme and gives the pretty and becoming bonnet gives it a picturesque appearance. The entire outfit is comfortable and to keep it from being uncomfortable and to take up as little room and impede the movements as little as possible.

Moreso, it is a fact that the collar over which the hood overlaps—that on the coat the gauntlets cover the lower part and the high collar covers the bands and the division part at the waist there is not a crease where the wind can slip in, as it would certainly be apt to do when one is whistling through the air at the rate of a mile a minute.

EDITORIAL OPINIONS.

The idea of teaching every girl to thump a piano and every boy to be a book-keeper will make potato $8.00 per barrel in 20 years.

Haman said: "Give me authority to kill a Jew in the province and I will pay into the King's treasury ten thousand talents of silver." That was high license.

A woman whose husband died recently leaving her $2000 life insurance reported the sad news to her relatives thusly: "Jim died this week, less fully covered by insurance."

Now days when people want anything, they look in the newspapers for it. If they want the services of a painter, a carpenter, a plumber, a plasterer or any other mechanic or tradesman, they expect to find a card in the paper. They look for it, if they find it, the advertiser gets a job. Advertising pays.

Foreign missionaries will be pleased to hear that the King of the Cannibal Islands, who was wont to broil them in coals on his evening fire, has passed in his utensils. His last feast was an old editor who had turned missionary. The editor's check proved to be indigestible and for the first time in his life the King succumbed to the force of circumstances.

When you hear a man prating about how he loves his fellow man and the ignorance of the working class and you see him month after month peddling whiskey to the same people, you can put him down as the man who helps to keep him in ignorance and his profession of love for them is a damn lie.

For the benefit of those who abhor printer's ink as a prime factor to the advancement of their interests, we would state that Samson, the strong party, was the first man to advertise. He took two solid columns to demonstrate his strength and knocked his competitor flat, in fact he brought down the house.

Never send articles for publication without giving thy name for thy name often secures publication for a worthless article. Thou shouldst never read the copy on the printer's case or look container thereof or he may knock thee down. It is not right that thou should ask him who is the author of an article for it is his duty to keep such things to himself.

The South side of our townsite is now on the market and there are few places along the Crow line that can compare with this part of our town. It is studded with beautiful pines and poplars and makes a splendid view from any point. These shade trees should be protected by all our citizens and no person should be permitted to remove one unless it interferes with building operations.

Our school teachers are working hard and successfully but they never know whether their work is appreciated or not unless they have some intimation to the effect from the patrons of the school. Parents should make it a point to visit at least the rooms in which they have children. Kindly visits from parents have an inspiring influence both for teacher and pupils and if the visit be accompanied by an occasional word of encouragement, so much the better.

Great credit should be given to the Calgary Albertan for the stand taken by that daily journal against the great increase in the cost of living throughout the whole country. The cost of living has advanced greatly during the past three years while salaries have remained at a stand-still and in many cases have been reduced. Some people claim that wages and salaries have been increased during the past few years, but what shall it profit a man if he should receive a slight increase if the increase in the necessities of life are greater. We wish the Albertan and all other papers success in the fight for a square deal.

The vacancy caused by the resignation of one of the Frank village councillors has caused considerable dismay among the villagers, but this event has not changed the course of the comet one jot or tittle.

Progress At Oil Fields

Recently authorities of high international repute have visited the field of operation of the Canadian Northwest Oil Company and their unanimity of praise is heard on every hand. It is noteworthy that from men not momentarily interested in the project come words of commendation for the true business-like methods this company has adopted in their field. The improvements to the plant and property and material as an expenditure in exploiting for oil pools is now well in hand and before long the boilers will reach the flow, which indicated by the increasing seepages will far outreach the primary expectations. They have the authority of Dr. Dawson, whose reports are always dependable, that oil will be obtained at from 2100 to 2400 feet. To drill to that depth is in itself a tremendous task, the management has secured the well tried methods of drilling and are most persistent in their operations. We learn that they have every right to their sustaining assurances, there is no admission of a doubt heard, even the sceptic has been throttled after a visit to the scene.

Throughout the Dominion, attention is directed towards Pincher Creek. The interest in stock both locally, general and in large markets is keener than ever and the reason is not far to seek. Of all the companies operating in Alberta, this one has shown more assiduity in its labors and has more substantial proof of its ultimate success than others. Pincher Creek will be better off for this, when the oil is marketed the town and district will be given a prominence that will make it famous. From the ballings at present, it is safe to bank upon a flow being struck at a lower depth than may have been thought.

The work is going on enthusiastically by the skilled men at the boring plants, hard odds have been encountered but, nothing daunted, the machinery is kept humming and it so will be until the task is accomplished. Then for reward to judicious handling and unabated energy and profitable returns to investors. The project on which the entire Dominion is eagerly watching and one which we in and around Pincher Creek and those who have visited the field have every faith in. — Echo.

CHAPTER III.

WHEN he reached the farm, overheatened from his rapid walk in the sun, he stopped at the springhouse to get a glass of water before going into the kitchen.

It was with a sudden sharp thrill that as he stepped into the cool, shady stone room he unexpectedly found himself alone with Eunice.

She had come up the stone steps by the well, bending laboriously over a torn sheet of a newspaper.

As his figure suddenly darkened the doorway she started violently—as though discovered in some shameful act. He was held spellbound by the picture she made, the grace-of-youthful form in its tense attitude of actual fear, the beauty of her wide, frightened eyes, the exquisite delicacy of her face in its sudden whiteness, though it was not so complimentary.

"What a craven little coward!" was his mental comment, with an impulse of contemptuous pity, for he had not lived here ten days without having seen that this girl was a creature of moment, though downy-headed as none but a girl of weak or mean spirit would permit herself to be, and he understood that her present sense of guilt was due to the contraband newspaper she was found idly reading when she was making her morning call on him. As he had observed, the girl was never allowed ten minutes of relaxation from morning to night; also, Mr. Morningstar had strictly forbidden his household to touch the "gentleman's bounder" daily, partly because pronounced a nonconformist at station.

So it was only a feeling of fear that could rouse her from her lethargy. "It's only I," he said apologetically. "May I come in and get a glass of water?"

He did not seem much reassured by the fact that it was only he. She sank haphazard against the step as he came forward and helped himself, but her eyes as they followed him did not lose their strained expression nor her face regain its color. She watched him curiously as he slowly drank a glass of water. The newspaper was encamped into her lap, and her gaze seemed held by his in a sort of fascination.

"Don't be afraid," he smiled upon her. "I don't tell."

"She did not answer. She seemed spellbound. He wondered whether he could make her talk. At least he had made her look at him.

"It's one of my newspapers, isn't it?" he asked.

"She only gasped.

"Old Morningstar makes me hand them over to him to be burned every morning. How did you rescue one?"

She swallowed hard as she managed to answer in a voice just above a whisper. "I don't know where the stove to be burned when I light the fire for breakfast. I take them out."

"Ah? And then snatches chances like this for reading them?"

"Yes."

"Unconventional, I suppose, thoughtful." Upon my word, she was!

They looked at each other for an instant without speaking.

"You have never read a newspaper, I suppose, before I came here?"

"Do you find them amusing?"

"Amusing?" she repeated, the strained expression in her eyes giving way to a puzzled look.

"Well," he conceded, "perhaps you don't find them funny, but I do. I record accidents, interesting, I should have said. Do you like them?" he added, groping for words intelligent to her simplicity.

"Yes."

"But you don't read with much pleasure, when you have to match chance moments at them in this way?"

She did not reply.

"And much that you read would be unintelligible to you, I should say, for you are not accustomed to reading newspapers. I can't see how you get enough out of it to pay for such a fright as you had just now when you thought you were being caught."

Still she did not answer. He thought, marveling that so dull a dame should have a pair of eyes that shone like stars and a countenance of such extraordinary thoughtfulness. "Now, if she were an intelligent girl it would be interesting to get her fresh impression of a news item."

Suddenly, while he regarded her speculatively, sipping his water with deliberation and she returned his gaze with a sort of fascinated consciousness, the door burst open and a daughter, and this time it was he who was startled with apprehension as Mr. Morningstar came into the springhouse. Eunice was instantly aware of the fact that the girl did not start now nor attempt to run away, but rather stood there, the presence of the scrubby, illiterate farmer seemed suddenly to dissipate the spell which he had evidently cast upon her, so she rose quite deliberately and began to gather together the papers, keeping the newspaper in her hand.

The small eyed farmer cast a quick, suspicious glance from one to another of them.

"Mom wants you to hurry on in there," he gruffly ordered the girl. "She connected that you and Abe was spooed together out here. What does it take you so wonderful to get a cup of butter and milk yet? Mom'll law you, you'll see scared here."

He had caught sight of the newspaper and jerked it from her hand. "What's this?" he said.

"It belongs to the gentleman," the girl answered, quite untroubled.

"And you give it to her?" the farmer asked, looking reproachfully at Kino.

"I dropped it in here and came back to look for it. Eunice had picked it up and was going to give it to me."

"Och, wull!" the farmer nodded, passing it on to him. Kinoes as he took

"The guest's comfort."

Modern Hostesses Strive For Best Conditions in a Visitor's Room.

Going visiting in her own home means a lot more than the pleasure of finding out who makes her guests comfortable. By sleeping in the beds she provides for the friends within her gates she learns just what sort of nights her friends pass with her, and she can make arrangements that are too heavy to be brought and cast out.

One hostess made a belated trial of this plan. Recovered in her horror that she had been corralling her guests for a sumptuous night at a broken spring which she had not anticipated until she passed a night on it.

Blinds that let in light on the sleepers' eyes, curtains or screens that are easily adjusted, loose shingles that rat-tat against the pane—these are inconveniences that may cause a guest infinite discomfort; and only by sleeping in the room can the hostess discover them.

The woman who strives to be a good hostess and what comes of it—two weeks after little things as well as big ones. No small detail in the guest room is missing. A charming pelmet hangs in the closet, with slippers to match, ready for the visitor. This is according to custom, and a guest's room is a veritable shrine—there is a small trunk that it is a nuisance to take one when going to a friend's house. The perfect guest's room includes a well appointed writing table, with plenty of stamps, paper, envelopes, ink, and a good, deep inkstand with enough space in it, some fresh blotting paper and pens with the both thick and thin.

On the dressing table there should be a pretty pincushion, with black and white pins and some fancy velvet, and a small tray for the mirror, a pair of scissors and darning silk. Then there must be a little alcohol heat curling lamp and, to prevent accident, a small tile to set it on.

A framed card reading in the room is a good idea for morale, the hour when the housework is done, and without a word started for the house. He had been wondering whether it would be better to let the maid come to help her carry in her crocks and things, and by the time she was ready to leave he had decided against it. But just as he reached the springhouse, Kinoes he bethought him to return the paper to her.

Quickly folding it into the smallest possible package, he handed it to her, and she held it out to him.

"Can't you conceal it about you?" he asked.

She turned white again as he spoke to her. "Please hurry on in, Eunice."

He went away, but Eunice did not so much as glance at Kinoes when they were again alone for a moment. She had been alone for a week, looking herself down with her wear and without a word started for the house.

DISCO/ERIES AFTER DEATH.

Wedding Breakfast Seventy Years Old

Found in Room.

The recent discovery, after the death of a well-known man in the Midlands, of a roomful of unopened parcels, the accumulation of over forty years, recall many stories of the lives which dead men have left behind them some very remarkable and quite unexpected possessions.

Mr. A. M. Brooks, of the Rev. Mr. Hagonote, a Leicestershire clergyman, were examined after his decease, the following startling ascertments of his possessions being made: Thirty gowns and cassocks, one hundred pairs of boots, four hundred pairs of stockings, eight pairs of breeches (though he never wore a wig in his life), eighty wagons and carts, eighty wagons (not one of which had been used), fifty hundred pickaxes, two hundred shovels, two hundred spades, seventy-four ladders, two hundred and forty-nine rakes, and several scores of walking-sticks.

When George III. died no fewer than five hundred of his pocket-books were found, containing £100,000 worth of money, and his library was a large collection of women's hair, locks of all colors and lengths, some with gold and ornaments, with adjoining rings and bracelets, and a pair of ladies gloves, each pair, no doubt, with a romantic history of its own. "There were also," he said, "a great number of wigs, and every sort of uniform, and the costume of every nation in the world."

Not long ago when a Yorkshire lad, who had been well-to-do, died, no trace whatever could be found of the sum of money she was supposed to possess. There was, however, a hole through almost every room of the house, scores of tiny pinholes, each of which was found on examination to contain a diamond of considerable value.

The eccentric old lady, fearing of losing her capital, had invested every pound of it for safety in these innocent-looking receptacles.

Equally curious was the discovery made on the death of Mr. Peter Jackson, a North country bachelor, who during his life had been noted for the shabbiness of his attire, and who, when he died, was found to wear the same suit, patched and repatched until practically none of the original cloth remained. For the last thirty years he had lived in poverty, and had never been able to afford a妻, who had had to support him.

A widow usually knows what she wants and how to get it.

If the reader decides to try it, get three ounces of ordinary soap, one ounce of common salt, one ounce compound fluid hand-work: mix and let stand two hours; then get one ounce compound tincture ecdetome compound (no cardamom), mix all together, shake well and take a teaspoonful, attach much meal and one of them, when retiring.

A certain well-known medical expert says that thousands of men and women suffering from salt-burn, all because of dormant circulation of the blood and a consequential impairment of the heart, will be relieved when they take a few drops of this remedy.

On one occasion a friend of a brother novelist was on a boat to meet Mr. Weyman. After some trouble finding the novelist, he met Mr. Anthony Hope, succeeded in luring Mr. Weyman into a cab and conveying him to Kensington. Having mounted the steps of his residence, he knocked at the door, exclaiming triumphantly: "Here he is; we've got him at last!" and turned round just in time to catch a pistol. When he had pulled it disappearing through the front door!

A Very Shy Novelist.

Particular interest attaches itself to Mr. Stanley Weyman's story, "The Long Night," in view of the fact that this famous novelist has practically re-written it from scratch.

Mr. Weyman, however, preferred that the public should judge him by his books alone. But when he was asked if he had any friends or a brother novelist, he replied that some friends of a brother novelist were on one occasion anxious to meet Mr. Weyman. After some trouble finding the novelist, he met Mr. Anthony Hope, succeeded in luring Mr. Weyman into a cab and conveying him to Kensington. Having mounted the steps of his residence, he knocked at the door, exclaiming triumphantly: "Here he is; we've got him at last!" and turned round just in time to catch a pistol. "Old Salts" in the Lords.

When Admiral of the Fleet Sir John Price took command of the Household Cavalry he will find quite a large number of "old salts" ready to welcome him. The Duke of Hamilton was at one time a leading member of the Earl of Wharncliffe's regiment, and Viscount Sidmouth a captain also held by the Earl of Wharncliffe. The Earl of Hardwicke was a retired naval captain; the Earl of St. Germaine was a colonel at that time in the army, in which the Earl of Wharncliffe attained the rank of commander; and Viscount Sidmouth a general also held by the Earl of Wharncliffe. Another well-known member of the Upper House, Lord Ellenborough, was a colonel in the Royal Regiment of Dragoons, and the Earl of Glasgow is a retired captain.

BODY COVERED WITH ECZEMA

Yet Zam-Buk Cured Him

Mr. A. M. Brooks, of Wellington St., Steeton, says:

Ten months ago I contracted a severe attack of eczema, which first appeared on my face, then spreading over my body. The doctor thought this was caused by the irritation of my shirt collar and the poison and stains from the paint I used in painting the Pulp Mill. I began doctoring, but instead of the disease being cured, it showed signs of becoming worse, and my nose became so sore that my whole nose was in a frightful condition.

The skin was actually peeled off, leaving the flesh raw, and the intense itching and soreness, and was completely confined to the house. Not seeing or feeling any improvement, I next consulted a physician, who prescribed ointments recommended for skin diseases, but although I gave each preparation a fair trial, nothing seemed powerful enough to bring about a cure.

Then I tried Zam-Buk. It had some relief, and I continued to use it.

From the first application of Zam-Buk I had some relief, and as I continued to use it with its directions, the cure was in progress, and the skin was drawn out and the intense itching and aching completely vanished. Scabs or scales were now the only evidence of the disease.

After a week of using Zam-Buk the two sentences on the blackboard, one grammatically wrong, the other a misstatement of facts. The sentences were:

"The hen has three legs. Who done it?"

"Willie," she said, "go to the blackboard and write down the fault this hen did."

Willie did so. To her astonishment, he wrote:

"The hen never done it; God done it."

Willing to Oblige

An Irish politician was addressing a crowd in a frenzied speech. Several of his assertions, considered in entire disregard of other members of the audience, turned to his neighbor and said: "This man reminds me of the Irish leader who said, 'I am willing to oblige."

"Mine," he says, "we are on the verge of battle, and I want to say before ye start, Will ye fight or will ye run?" "We'll do, says he. "We will not," says they. "Aha! thank ye, me min'! says he. "I thought ye wad."

A Newark school was instructing her students in the composition of sentences. After a talk of words and sentence structure, the teacher wrote two sentences on the blackboard, one grammatically wrong, the other a misstatement of facts. The sentences were:

"The hen has three legs. Who done it?"

"Willie," she said, "go to the blackboard and write down the fault this hen did."

Willie did so. To her astonishment, he wrote:

"The hen never done it; God done it."

This figure, instead of being fastened above it, but the doorway is low and the knocker easily reached. Above the door is an interesting inscription, "The price of a home is health." This has been put up in honor of one of his ancestors and it reads:

"In memory of Uncle Cleaman who died in 1900 at 90 years. He was kind and well disposed, and respected by both whites and Indians. In December '92 he gave away with the help of his wife and children all his property in blankets, canoes, etc., valued at $4,000 dollars that he was his eighth large potash and feast."

This sign is painted and was apparently made by a white man, but the wording and the arrangement of the lines show that the work was done to him.

The reference to the giving away of blankets and canoes is characteristic of these people, but the position in the tribe but also credit, for the property was always returned with interest and feasting in due course.

At first this latter fact was not understood by the missionaries and Indians, but the practice of giving away of blankets and canoes was a natural waste of property. They caused a law to be passed in British Columbia making it a criminal offense to give away property to Indians, but the Indians were inspired for disobeying the law by continuing their forefathers' method of financial support, but the law was no longer enforced.

Sometimes property was given away for the benefit of sons or daughters. When these became adults, the parents would give them an aristocratic position and credit of which they were proud and are the sons of families of official position like that of Mr. Davidsons.

It is to render the stomach to proper action that Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will do this. Simple directions go with each packet and a course of the tablets taken systematically is certain to effect a cure.

After dining, the restaurant patron proceeded to tip the bill with a coin.

"But this coin is counterfeit."

"Is that so?" exclaimed the other.

"Well, keep it for your honesty."

SANITARY ANTISEPTIC SHAVING

Not only is Cuticura Ointment, assisted by Cuticura Soap, unrivaled for preserving, purifying and clarifying the skin, but it is also a perfect antiseptic.

On this occasion the clerk called out the name of a juror, and the latter, who was apparently not well known, said, "Get into the dock," called out one of the constables after him. The juror was led into the dock, where he reached the prisoner's dock, when he stopped, turned and walked in and seated himself. There was little room in the dock, but Judge MacMahon was seated, and the prisoner's dock was made to fit him.
